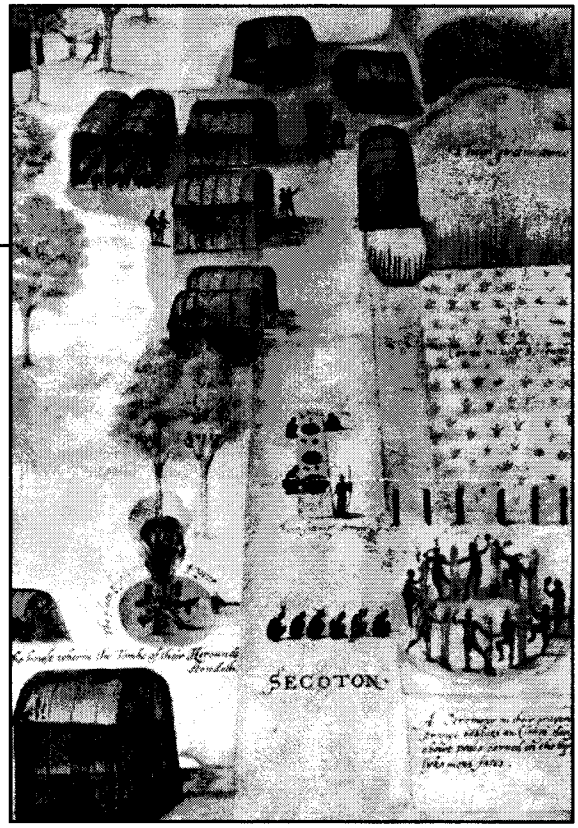
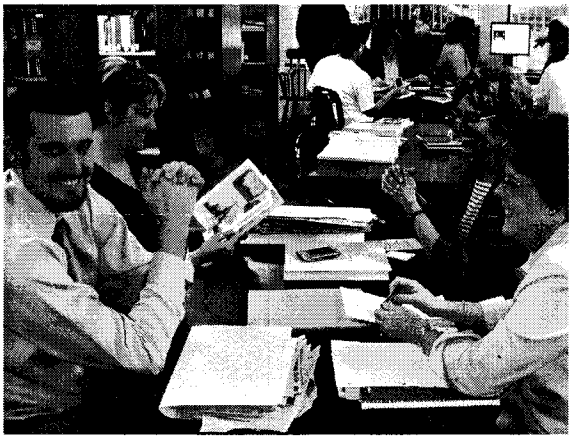
The Nanticoke Indians of the Eastern Shore

November is celebrated nationally as National American Indian Heritage Month. In honor of this designation, the Nabb Research Center revisits a display initially created for the 300th anniversary celebration of Vienna, MD, titled, "The Nanticoke Indians of the Eastern Shore." Artifacts and storyboards follow the contact history of English settlement and the Nanticoke Indians from 1608-1770.





An Educational Visit

Dr. Regina Royer brought her graduate students in Education 589, Multimedia in the Constructivist Classroom, to the Nabb Research Center for research material on several regional communities.

"We're History...Without You"

Bacon Donates Material Culture

As part of his very large, decades-long personal collection of 18th to early 20th century tools, George Bacon of Norfolk, VA, recently donated a sampling of tools and part of his library. Dr. Ray Thompson, in his graduate History 601 seminar, used these new acquisitions to demonstrate these items of material culture to his students.

Pictured are a sampling of the tools donated by George Bacon, which are commonly found in estate inventories examined by both undergraduate and graduate students: auger (hand drill), wooden mallet, flesh fork and broad axe.
